The Agent that goes the Extra Mile

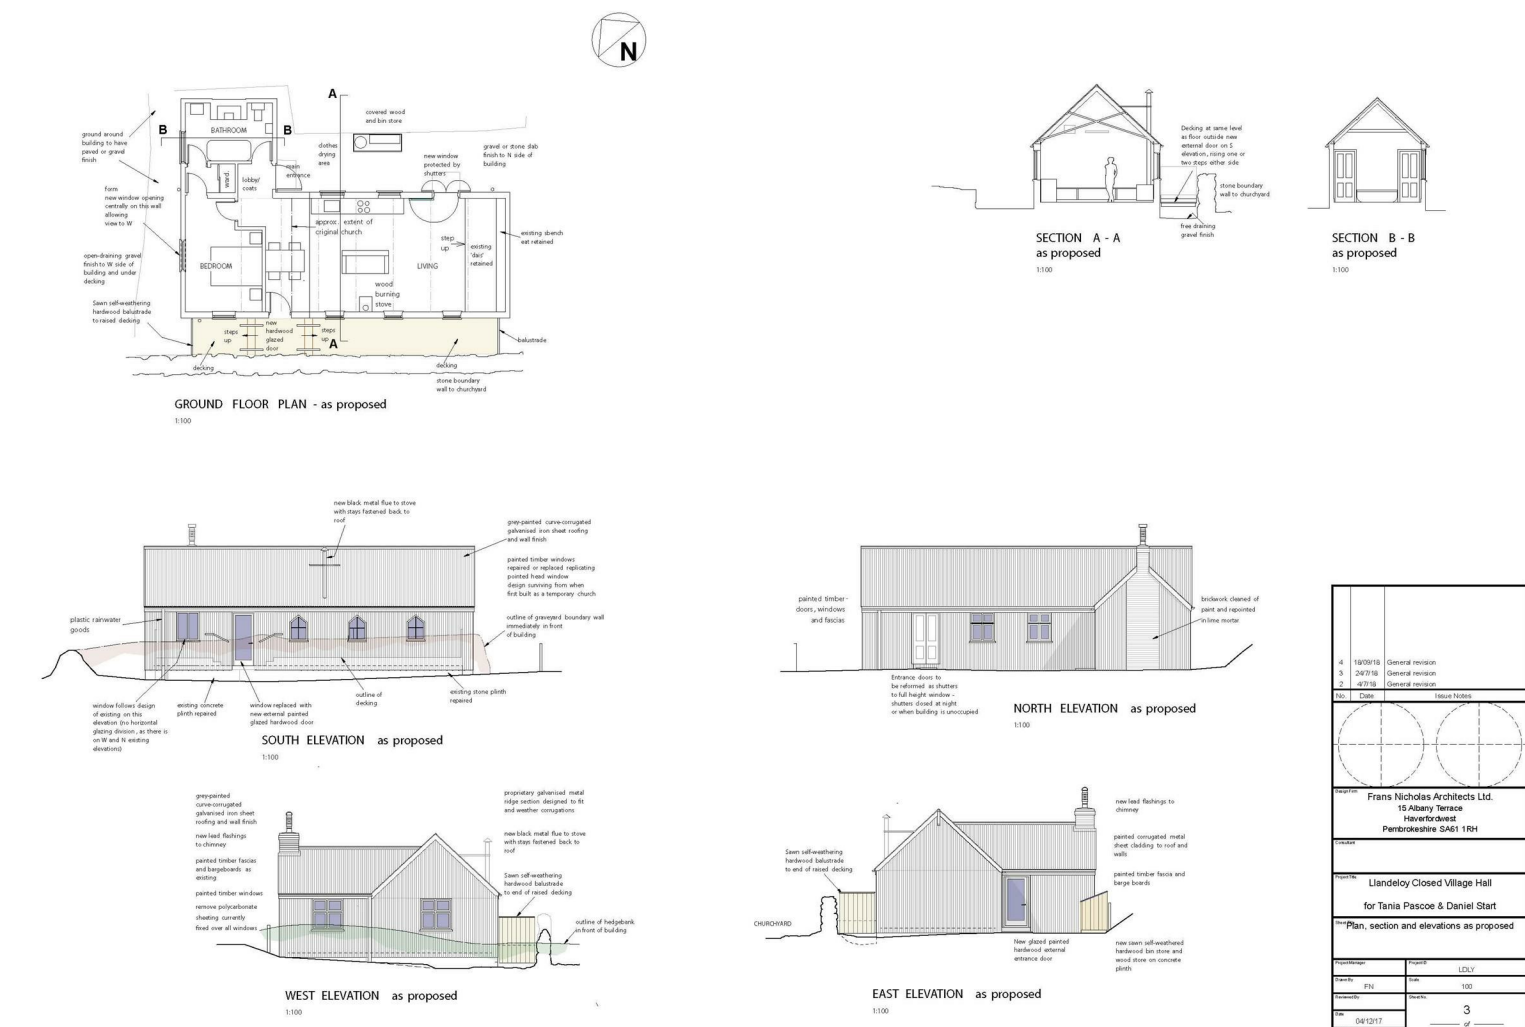

Llanddeloy is quaint rural hamlet just 10 minutes from St Davids and some of North Pembrokeshire's most popular beaches (e.g. Newgale, Aberiddy Blue Lagoon).

Llanddeloy Village Hall is a rare surviving example of traditional Welsh 'tin tabernacle' believed to have been built in 1880 by the local community as a temporary church, and later converted and extended to form a village hall. It sits adjacent to the beautiful St. Teilo's church, one of the finest medieval churches in Wales, restored in the 1920s by John Coates Carter, Wales finest Arts and Crafts architect, and now preserved by the national charity The Friends of Friendless Churches in perpetuity. The plain exterior of the Hall belies a beautiful timber Victorian carpentry with tongue and groove panelling, elegant slender scissor trusses, gothic timber windows and a brick-built transept.

The property is not listed and full planning permission has been granted (reference 18/0915/PA) and is currently underway to convert it into a one-bedroom house, retaining the beautiful interior features. In addition permission has been granted for a new window to the west, opening up views and light - and a raised outdoor decking area which will enjoy the Southerly views across the fields, meadow and church. Work to the property has commenced by connecting to mains water and drainage. Electricity is already connected. There is on-road parking and the property can be converted using insulated corrugated profile steel. The current owners have several details which could help a future simple and highly insulated conversion. The property could be efficiently heated using wall-mounted, standalone AC heatpump units. The current owners have moved away and can no longer continue the development, but it will make a unique small home in a beautiful location.
