SUMMARY

This is a substantial detached late Georgian Grade II listed villa that combines historic character with modern living. Tucked away on a quiet no-through road in a village-style setting, the house retains an impressive range of original period features, including a full-width timber trellis verandah, lattice-glazed windows, decorative fretted arches, a hipped slate roof, pointed arches, stained glass & original fireplaces, all of which have been preserved while the property has been sympathetically updated with contemporary fittings & décor.

The accommodation is generously proportioned, offering 3 reception rooms overlooking the front garden, a fitted kitchen with integrated appliances, a utility room, pantry, workshop, 4 double bedrooms, a study, 2 bathrooms and a separate WC, making it well suited to family living. Externally, the property benefits from a mature south-facing walled garden that wraps around the house, providing a private & attractive outdoor space, together with a large garage & driveway parking for two vehicles. The Grade II listing means the home has significant architectural importance and exceptional character. Overall, the property offers a rare combination of period elegance, generous accommodation, modern convenience & a peaceful setting, making it an appealing choice for buyers seeking a distinctive historic family home.

HISTORY

This residence was owned by Charles Armitage Brown between 1835 & 1841. Brown affectionately described it as one of "six gentlemen's cottages" located around 2 miles from the town centre near an arm of the sea. The property holds particular literary significance, as it was here that Brown wrote his first memoir of John Keats. Its layout & peaceful semi-rural setting reminded him of Wentworth Place, the home he had previously shared with Keats in Hampstead, making the residence an important part of both Brown's life & the enduring legacy of one of England's greatest Romantic poets.
