Title register restrictions (DY449585):

- The lease includes rules on 'alienation', which means the owner must follow specific steps and potentially get permission if they want to sell or rent out the property.

- The property is subject to 'restrictive covenants' (legal promises not to do certain things) mentioned in a 2006 document between previous corporate owners.

- The property is subject to rights 'reserved' in the 2006 transfer and the lease, which means other people (such as the landlord or neighbors) may have the right to use or access parts of this land.

- The 2013 sale document contains 'personal covenants', which are legal promises made by the current owner to the previous owner.

- There is a rule regarding 'light and air' which prevents the owner from claiming a legal right to light, meaning they cannot stop neighbors from building something that might block their sunlight.

- A specific legal rule has been excluded to ensure that only the rights explicitly written in the deeds are granted, rather than any rights that might be automatically implied by law.
