Location

The property occupies a central position on Daventry Street, one of the primary commercial thoroughfares in the historic market town of Southam, Warwickshire. Daventry Street forms part of the town centre core, with a mix of independent shops, professional services, cafes, restaurants and convenience amenities within easy walking distance. The location benefits from regular pedestrian activity and good visibility, supporting a steady level of passing trade. Southam offers convenient accessibility, with the A425 and A423 providing links to the wider road network including the M40 motorway (Junction 12) to the south-east, connecting the town efficiently to Birmingham, Oxford and London. Local bus services operate along Daventry Street and surrounding routes, linking the town with neighbouring communities and transport hubs.

Description

The property comprises a ground floor commercial unit with flexible accommodation suitable for a variety of retail, office or service-based uses (subject to necessary consents). The premises provides an open-plan main trading area, enhanced by a traditional glazed frontage that offers excellent natural light and high visibility onto Daventry Street. Internally, the layout lends itself well to customer-facing operations with a clear front retail / reception area, supported by rear ancillary spaces which can be utilised for storage, staff facilities or back-of-house functions. The interior presents a practical blank canvas for a range of occupiers, with straightforward configuration options for bespoke fit-out or refurbishment to suit individual business requirements. This commercial unit is ideal for professional firms, independent retailers, salon or personal services operators, and similar occupiers looking to benefit from a town centre address with prominent frontage and pedestrian access.
