About Stanhope

Stanhope is a charming market town located in the Weardale Valley within the North Pennines Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) in County Durham, England. Known for its scenic landscapes, rich history, and geological significance, Stanhope serves as a gateway to outdoor exploration in the North Pennines.

The town is notable for its 12th-century St. Thomas' Church and a fossil tree stump over 300 million years old displayed in the churchyard. The Durham Dales Centre offers local crafts, a café, and tourist information. The nearby Weardale Railway provides heritage train rides through the picturesque countryside.

Stanhope is popular with walkers and nature enthusiasts due to its access to the surrounding moorlands, rivers, and trails, including the Weardale Way. Events like the Stanhope Agricultural Show reflect its deep-rooted rural traditions. With a mix of historical sites, natural beauty, and community charm, Stanhope is both a peaceful place to live and a welcoming destination for visitors.

Stanhope's town centre, primarily around Front Street and the Market Place, offers a selection of independent businesses, small retailers, and cafes, giving the area a traditional market-town feel. As well as local schools in the village and a nearby secondary school located about 10 miles from Stanhope in Wolsingham.
