FEOCK

The desirable village of Feock is centred around a historic parish church and is surrounded by scenic riverside walks. Just north of the village lies the renowned National Trust-owned Trellissick House and Gardens, celebrated nationally for their stunning botanical displays and far-reaching estuary views. Nearby, the King Harry Ferry offers convenient access to the unspoiled Roseland Peninsula, with its charming coastal destinations including St Mawes and Porthscatho.

The picturesque Loe Beach is also close at hand, featuring a sailing school, a waterfront café, and excellent boating facilities—perfect for day sailing in some of the country's finest waters. Additionally, a large and well-equipped children's play area and recreation ground are situated nearby, enhancing the area's appeal for families.

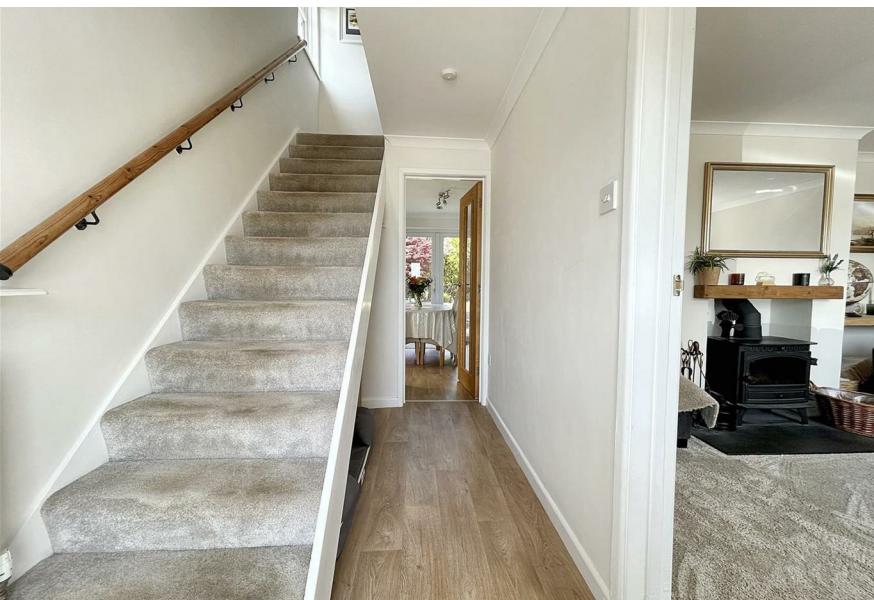

Feock falls within the catchment area for the highly regarded and sought-after Kea School, with an extensive selection of educational facilities available in the nearby Cathedral City of Truro.

TRURO

The city of Truro serves as Cornwall's retail and commercial hub, with its iconic Cathedral at the heart of the city. Truro offers a vibrant blend of independent boutiques and national retailers, alongside a rich selection of art galleries, bars, restaurants, nightclubs, and cultural venues including the Hall for Cornwall and the Royal Cornwall Museum. Steeped in history, the city boasts elegant Georgian terraces—arguably the finest in the West Country outside of Bath. Truro is also home to beautifully maintained municipal gardens such as Boscowen Park and Victoria Gardens, both of which have earned accolades in the Britain in Bloom competition. Conveniently, Truro lies at the centre of Cornwall's transport network and benefits from a mainline railway station with direct services to London Paddington.
