GENERAL COMMENTS

Tregidgeo House is situated in an unspoilt countryside setting. This charming Cornish farmhouse dates back several hundred years and was a working farm until the late 1990s. The house has a fascinating history and has clearly been extended numerous times since its original form. There are at least four different periods of the building with the most recent extension added in the Victorian era.

The house has undergone an extensive programme of refurbishment in recent years and has been carefully restored and is now presented to the highest of standards. Tregidgeo House is a property of unique charm and character and one of the most desirable homes in this part of the county.

THE PROPERTY

The beautifully presented accommodation extends to almost 4,000 square feet and offers six bedrooms, the master with dressing room and three with en-suites as well as a family bathroom to the first floor. The current owners have transformed the living space creating a modern family room which is open plan with a stunning kitchen with Aga and all opening to the gardens.

Furthermore there is a sitting room as well as an entrance porch and a splendid galleried reception hall which is a magnificent feature of the property. Furthermore there is a separate utility room and shower room to the ground floor.

There are two gated entrances into the property which provide access to the house and grounds. There is ample parking as well as various outbuildings including a former piggery, general purpose outbuilding and a former cow shed which offer huge potential subject to consents.

The grounds extend to just under 2 acres and comprise fabulous lawned gardens with mature hedging and trees, vegetable beds, and wild flowers.

HISTORY

Records suggest that the property has been of significance for hundreds of years with mention made as early as 1415 when it was the birthplace of Ralph Tregisiou, who became the Dean of Exeter. Tregidgeo has seen many different owners one of whom was a branch of the Tremayne family of Heligan. John Tremayne bought Tregidgeo in 1750 along with two other farms in the parish for £752. It remained part of the Tremayne estate until it was sold in 1890 to Mr Roberts whose family continued to farm the land for more than a century. The house is interesting with evidence of an early, original house still existing within the overall building and possibly dating from the 16th or early 17th century. It is a fascinating house full of interest and steeped in history and with echoes of grandeur which are a testimony to a bygone era.

LOCATION

Located along a country lane, surrounded by farmland, the property enjoys a sunny south facing aspect and complete privacy from neighbouring properties. The villages of Grampound and Tregony are within three miles with good village facilities. The Lost Gardens of Heligan are within two to three miles with sandy beaches of the Roseland Peninsula and at Caerhayes, Porthluney Cove are all within easy reach.

TREGONY

Tregony is a thriving community, sometimes referred to as the "gateway to the Roseland" offering a post office, shop, pub, Churches and both primary and secondary schools are within a short 10 minute walk. The village is easily accessible to the whole of the Roseland Peninsula and hence very much a centre for tourism during the summer months. The city of Truro is about seven miles and St. Austell slightly further. The village also has the benefit of a regular bus service. The harbourside villages of Portloe and Portscatho are each about four and seven miles distant, and St Mawes is about 11 miles to the south.

MEVAGISSEY

Mevagissey is well known to tourists as a fishing village on the south Cornish coast and is particularly noteworthy for its harbour and quaint fishermans cottages in the narrow streets as well as a range of amenities.

GRAMPOUND

The village of Grampound lies on the A390 between Truro and St. Austell and offers a variety of local facilities for daily needs including shop, church, primary school, pub, village amenities cafe and village hall. The village has the benefit of a regular bus service and is also close to the picturesque attractions of the Roseland Peninsula and the south Cornish coast. The city of Truro with its fine Cathedral, major shopping centre and main line railway link to London (Paddington) is about nine miles. St. Austell is about six miles.

TRURO

Truro is renowned for its excellent shopping centre, fine selection of restaurants, bars, private and state schools and main line railway link to London (Paddington). The Hall for Cornwall is also a popular venue providing all year round entertainment and other cultural facilities include the Royal Cornwall Museum and the historic Cathedral.
