GENERAL COMMENTS AND LOCATION

St. Johns Terrace has remained remarkably unchanged over the years and to preserve its period integrity it now lies within a Conservation Area. Number 10 is a double fronted Grade II Listed house with handsome stone elevations, granite lintels and window surrounds and traditional sliding sash small pane windows. It is thought to have been built around 1840 and whilst strictly early-Victorian the architectural features are notably Georgian. The house has been refurbished over the last few years by current and previous owners and the whole property is beautifully presented throughout. The position within this sought after terrace is superb, opposite the former school playing field and enjoying stunning views over the tidal creek with Carclew Woods beyond. There is a small front garden enclosed behind attractive white railings whilst at the rear is a large enclosed terraced garden, stocked with many shrubs and plants providing a good degree of privacy from neighbouring properties. At the top of the garden is a very useful double garage accessed from Belmont Terrace. The accommodation includes four bedrooms (one with ensuite shower room), family bath and shower room, sitting room (formerly two rooms), conservatory-type dining room, kitchen with Aga, snug/playroom and utility with w.c. One of the bedrooms also opens to an additional room to the rear of the house which has direct external access and lends itself for use as a home office or perhaps an occasional fifth bedroom.

An internal viewing is absolutely essential.

Devoran lies halfway between the Cathedral city of Truro and the historic port of Falmouth just off the A39 at the head of Restronguet Creek. The area is well known for its scenic attractions with many walk ways in the area including the "tram way" along the edge of the creek which is known for its abundance of wildlife and shore birds and provides a lovely walk to the hamlets of Point and Penpol. Local facilities include the Parish Church, popular public house, doctors surgery and primary school with further facilities including a small supermarket in nearby Carnon Downs. Devoran lies close to the sailing waters of the Fal Estuary and benefits from a regular bus service. In the first half of the 19th century Devoran was a busy port shipping iron ore which was transported to the village from the inland mining areas via the Redruth and Chacewater four gauge railway which ran along the old tram road between Devoran and Penpol.

THE HOUSE

The house is Grade II listed. It is a very attractive double-fronted building (at the end of a block of three) with deep Georgian style sash windows and a central period porch to the front elevation all being perfectly enhanced with white painted railings to the village pavement. In 2022 the house had a new (reclaimed) Delabole slate roof at which time an extra bedroom was added within the roof space complete with ensuite shower room. There is much internal period detail including original panelled doors (some with coloured glass), deep skirting, period architraves and turning staircase. Sash windows have been restored with new cords and weights and the window shutters renovated to be in working order. Plaster has been renewed where necessary including a new ceiling in the Snug/Playroom where there is also a new wood-burning stove set within the original period surround. A notable feature of the house is the triple glazed conservatory-type dining room at the rear which is open plan to the kitchen where there is a gas-fired Aga stove. The solid oak floor of the dining room includes a glazed viewing panel of an old well originally serving the property. The family bath/shower room on the first floor has also recently been refitted. There is a comprehensive system of gas-fired central heating with period style radiators throughout.

In greater detail the accommodation comprises (all measurements are approximate):

OUTSIDE

A small area of garden to the front of the house is flanked by white railings which is very much a feature of the terrace. There is an area of lawn, flowerbed and a climbing wisteria. A pathway leads to the entrance porch and a side pathway gives access to the side entrance.

The rear garden is enclosed within a low walled boundary on either side whilst a raised patio provides plenty of very private sitting out space, perfect for entertaining and barbecues. From here there is access to a useful garden store and a half glazed door leads to the home office/fifth bedroom. Steps lead from the patio to a pathway which meanders up to the double garage. The garden is mainly lawn with many interesting mature trees and shrubs. A pedestrian gate gives rear access onto Belmont Terrace and a further door opens in to the large:-

with up and over metal door and side pedestrian door. Light and power connected.

Please note that Listed Building Planning Consent has recently been obtained for the replacement of the garage with a CAR PORT and adjacent HOME OFFICE. Plans are available for inspection.
