Location

Ruabon is one of the larger villages in Wrexham, with a population of approximately 3,000. It has a rich history which has been traced through the past 2,000 years. Sites of historical and archaeological interest still remain within walking distance of the centre of the village. The village is home to pubs, small shops and a post office on its high street. The A483, which divides the village, connects it with Wrexham Town and Chester to the North, Shropshire to the East and Oswestry, Builth Wells and Llandoverly to the South. Through Ruabon Railway Station, trains connect the village to Wrexham, Chester and Holyhead to the North, Birmingham to the East and Cardiff to the South. There is also an integrated bus service from the station providing transport to local destinations such as Llangollen, the aqueduct at Froncysyllte and the surrounding areas.
