Description

What would family life look like if everyone had space to make their own? Space to work, play, retreat and come together. Dale House provides just that.

Dating back to the 1800s, it has been thoughtfully extended for modern family life. A generous ground-floor extension and a second-floor conversion, completed in 2013, have created exceptional space while retaining original character.

At its heart, the original house remains. Character beams in the music room and the shape of the original building, best appreciated from the rear garden, offer reminders of where it all began. Yet you will find all the comforts of contemporary living, including underfloor heating and triple glazing throughout.

The extension has transformed the way the house is lived in. Mornings begin around the kitchen island, homework is tackled at the table and everyone comes back together at the end of the day. Sunday lunches stretch into the afternoon. Friends gather long after dinner has finished. Birthday parties. Christmas mornings. Everyday moments that become lasting memories.

Family life at Dale House is not confined to one room. The open-plan extension brings everyone together, while other spaces provide room to focus, relax or enjoy time alone. Two rooms are currently used as studies, though they could become a playroom, snug, gym or formal dining room.

Upstairs, the master bedroom leaves a lasting impression, with its cathedral ceiling and beautifully finished ensuite. There are three further bedrooms and a family bathroom and stairs up to the second floor, where a generous bedroom with ensuite offers the perfect retreat for an older child or guests.

Outside, a triple garage, generous parking and patio lead to an enclosed rear garden framed by mature hedging and trees, with a covered dining and seating area.

A large family home. A village with a strong sense of community. A place where everyone has space to grow. Could Dale House be the next the next chapter for your family?
