Description

Looking for a house where the possibilities are still yours to shape? Where not every decision has already been made for you? Welcome to Trade Winds.

Loved, lived in and filled with family life, it is a house with a story already written...but with plenty of room for you to begin it's next chapter.

Set in the peaceful village of Halloughton, just a few minutes from Southwell, life here feels reassuringly uncomplicated. There is a quietness to the village, the sort that comes with having open countryside on your doorstep. Yet everyday life remains wonderfully practical, within The Minster School catchment, on the school bus route and Southwell's independent shops, cafés and restaurants all close at hand.

The house itself has all the ingredients of a forever family home. With six bedrooms, generous reception rooms and a kitchen with an adjacent dining room that feels destined to become one beautiful open-plan space, opening onto the patio and south-facing garden beyond. It is easy to imagine family breakfasts stretching into lazy Sunday afternoons, doors thrown open on warm summer days and muddy wellies left outside after hours spent exploring.

The south-facing garden is impressive enough in its own right, but it is what lies beyond that makes Tradewinds so very special. Beyond the garden lies your own 3.4 acre paddock, complete with two stables, giving way to open countryside beyond. It is difficult not to imagine children disappearing for hours with a football, a dog and their imagination, returning only when the light begins to fade. Equally, for those with horses, there is something rather lovely about knowing they are quite literally at the bottom of the garden.

It is the sort of home and space that quietly changes the rhythm of family life. And perhaps that is what makes Tradewinds so appealing. The beauty lies not only in everything it is today, but in everything it has the potential to become.
