TENURE & COUNCIL TAX BAND

Freehold.

Title contains restrictions or restrictive covenants.

Here is a summary but a property lawyer can advise further:

There is a formal restriction stating that a single owner (unless they are a trust corporation) cannot sell or transfer the property if it involves a payment of money, unless authorised by a court. This is a standard legal measure often used to protect the interests of multiple people who may have a stake in the property.

The property is subject to 'restrictive covenants' (binding rules) contained in a 1966 deed. These are rules that limit what can be done with the land to ensure it remains compatible with the surrounding area.

There are provisions regarding 'light or air'. This means the owner is restricted from building anything that would significantly block the natural light or airflow to neighbouring properties.

There are rules concerning boundary structures, which dictate how fences, walls, or hedges must be maintained or what types can be installed.

Title contains beneficial rights or easements

Here is a summary but a property lawyer can advise further:- The property benefits from legal rights granted in a 1966 deed.

These are positive rights (often called 'easements') that allow the owner to use or access certain services or parts of neighbouring land, such as shared utility pipes or access ways.

Council Tax Band: E (Source gov.uk Checked May 2026).

IMPORTANT INFORMATION - PROPERTY HELD IN TRUST

Please note that the property is currently held in trust. As a result, the sale may be subject to additional legal procedures and documentation beyond a standard transaction, including involvement from trustees and/or legal representatives. Buyers should be aware that this may have an impact on timescales for the conveyancing process. Prospective purchasers are advised to discuss this further with their solicitor at an early stage.

CONVEYANCING MADE EASY

We work closely with trusted conveyancer Richard Twyford of Taylor Rose, helping to ensure a smooth and efficient process from offer to completion. With clear communication between our teams, your sale or purchase can progress as quickly and seamlessly as possible.
