A rare opportunity to acquire a detached period property within this highly sought after central Cambridge location, the property was formally two apartments but could be reconverted into a family home and offers substantial scope for improvement, modernisation and potential enlargement, subject to the necessary consents. Occupying a detached plot along Herbert Street, the property retains attractive period features including sash windows and original fireplaces, whilst providing private rear garden, side access and exceptionally exciting potential, with detached homes of this nature and position becoming increasingly difficult to find within such close proximity to Cambridge city centre and its surrounding amenities.

LOCATION

Herbert Street is a well regarded residential road positioned off Chesterton Road and Milton Road within this convenient and increasingly popular north Cambridge location. The area provides an excellent range of nearby amenities including independent cafés, restaurants, public houses, supermarkets and everyday shopping facilities, together with pleasant riverside walks and green spaces close by. The property is particularly well placed for access to Cambridge city centre, Cambridge North Station, the Science and Business Parks, together with the A14 and M11 commuter routes. Cambridge Station, Addenbrooke's Hospital and the Biomedical Campus are also readily accessible. Cambridge itself offers an exceptional combination of historic architecture, world renowned academic institutions and thriving technology and biomedical sectors, continuing to make it one of the country's most desirable residential locations.
