WEST END HOUSE

Believed to have originally formed part of the Higham Estate, the property was historically two Victorian cottages—constructed from traditional flint and brick with decorative chimneys—later sympathetically combined to create a substantial and characterful country house. The home is not listed but lies within the village conservation area and is considered a building of local architectural importance due to its period charm and contribution to the historic streetscape. Coming to the market for the first time in over 35 years, West End House offers a rare combination of history, comfort, and lifestyle, and is a much-loved home that has been carefully maintained by the current owners.
